Carpatho-Rusyn Studies as an Emerging Scholarly Discipline

Elaine Rusinko, Editor

Not only do Carpatho-Rusyns exist, but the field of Carpatho-Rusyn Studies (Carpatho-Ruthenica) has come into its own as a professional scholarly discipline. During the past twenty years Carpatho-Rusyns have been a topic of intense scrutiny and discussion at North America's leading scholarly forum for the study of central and eastern Europe, the American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies. This volume includes 23 presentations delivered by senior and younger scholars at the annual conventions of America's Slavic Association between the years 1995 and 2006. Some topics (cinema, media, musical recordings, recent poetry, and prose) have never been discussed before in any serious manner.

Committing Community features:

- present-day politics and the national movement in the European homeland, by Paul Robert Magocsi and Patricia A. Krafcik
- new developments in the Rusyn language, by Robert A. Rothstein
- Lemko-Rusyns before and after their forced deportation, by Christopher Hann, Bogdan Horbal, and Susyn Mihalasky
- recent Rusyn-language poetry and prose, by Elaine Rusinko
- Rusyn-language media (newspapers, journals, and the Internet), by Patricia A. Krafcik and Brian Požun
- the Rusyn mentality through folk tales, by Nadiya Kushko
- literature, recorded music, and community life among Rusyn Americans, by Elaine Rusinko, Bogdan Horbal, and Robert Zecker
- Carpatho-Rusyns in European and American cinema, by Patricia A. Krafcik
